

A farm isn't all he learned to manage at Texas A&M.

After completing his undergraduate education at Texas A&M, Craig Clanton earned a medical degree from The Texas A&M University System Health Science Center College of Medicine. Like all A&M medical students, Dr. Clanton spent his third and fourth years of medical school training at Scott & White. Since then, Dr. Clanton has gone on to practice medicine at Scott & White and help manage the Scott & White Health Plan, one of the top-rated healthcare plans in America, serving 183,000 members. He also runs a farm where he and his wife are raising their family. And he still finds time to maintain the grounds at the church they attend. Respect for the dignity of others. Service to the community. Discipline in work. Loyalty to one's family and faith. Living a balanced life. The values instilled in him at Texas A&M and Scott & White are the same ones Dr. Clanton practices every day.
